

It's headed for us, but how much and when?

Courier Staff Report

That winter storm threat of snow is moving closer and expected to hit the Courierarea. The question of when and how much remains.

An alert from the Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency about 3:30 this morning said:

Alert: Winter Storm Warning until 1 p.m. Saturday

A storm system moving in from the Plains region will bring a round of snow and possibly some freezing rain starting tonight and lasting into tomorrow morning.

Wintry precipitation will gradually transition to rain Saturday morning and afternoon. ...Heavy snow expected.

Total snow accumulations around four inches expected. Isolated higher amounts possible.

The National Weather Service forecast as of 9:30 this morning said snow will begin tonight — mainly after 10 p.m. with a chance of precipitation at 80 percent. Accumulation of 1 to 2 inches is possible, the report said.

Saturday's forecast is for snow before 2 p.m., then rain, possibly mixed with snow.

The chance of precipitation is 90 percent for Saturday with new snow accumulation of 1 to 3 inches possible.

Snow, possibly mixed with rain is predicted before 3 a.m. Saturday, then snow likely, possibly mixed with freezing rain. New snow accumulation of around an inch is possible.

The chance of rain, snow, and freezing rain continues Sunday before 1 p.m. with a slight chance of rain between 1 p.m. and 2 p.m., then a slight chance of rain and snow after 2 p.m.

To our readers

Because of the forecasted timing of snow accumulation, your Saturday edition of The Madison Courier may be delivered later in the day. Carriers may elect to start routes in the daylight on Saturday to take advantage of safer road conditions. Thank you for your patience.

OLD FRIENDS AND MEMORIES

By TALI HUNT

A Madison resident had a visit from some special friends this week.

Robert (Bob) Cline, a retired Indiana State Police colonel, is a resident at the River Terrace Health Campus in downtown Madison.

Some of his brothers in blue from ISP, friends from Madison, and his daughter came together to make a surprise stop Wednesday afternoon to visit the 92-year-old Cline.

They let The Madison Courier and WKMNNews sit in with them as they shared memories of decades of their service to Hoosiers.

Cline's daughter, Mandy, and his friends, Jim White, Jim Grant and Dave Adams and State Police troopers Nate Adams and Stephen Stoneking joined the ISP superintendent, Douglas Carter, while Cline regaled them with stories from his extensive law enforcement career.

After serving in the Army Air Corps during World War II and earning a two-year certificate from Indiana University's Institute of Criminal Law Administration, Cline joined the Indiana State Police as a trooper. Cline rose from the lowest ranks in ISP to serve in the superintendent's office as the second in command to Supt. John T. Shettle. As an officer, Cline had served in several counties throughout southeastern Indiana.

After officially retiring from law enforcement, Cline applied his knowledge of computers to build a website — MadisonCameR-unning.com — to serve the community he and his late wife, Rita, made their home. His website is well-known for its sharing of photos and stories of local people and visitors as well as its attention to the Madison Regatta and many other special events of the city.

There were "war stories" and laughs before Supt. Carter presented Cline with an Honorary Superintendent Badge as a thank you for his years of dedicated service.

For a video of some of the special moments from that visit, go to WKMNNews.com and get Saturday's Madison Courier for more about the "colonel" as Bob Cline's friends call him.

House teacher pay plan clears its first hurdle

BY SHAINA CAVAZOS
Chalkbeat.org

A Republican bill calling on districts to raise teacher pay by making other budget cuts passed an Indiana House of Representatives education committee vote Wednesday, despite sharp criticism from school officials and education advocates.

The bill, which comes amid a statewide push for teacher raises, calls for school districts to spend 85 percent or more of their state funding on instruction-related costs, such as teacher salaries. But critics testified before the committee vote that even if districts were able to reduce their non-instructional spending, the bill doesn't require them to direct that money to teachers.

"It does not guarantee any pay increases for teachers," said Mike Brown, the state education department's legislative affairs director. "We all own this problem and must find a solution. Unfortunately, [the bill] is not that solution."

House Republicans countered that the bill — which passed 9-3 along party lines — was a "first step" toward getting teachers raises, a process that would likely take years. The bill next heads for discussion in the Ways and Means Committee.

"We know this is not the only thing necessary to move teacher salaries," said Rep. Bob Behning, House Education Committee chairman, adding that more overall funding for K-12 education and efforts would be needed in upcoming budget years.

The House plan further deflates expectations for considerable teacher raises in 2019. House Speaker Brian Bosma, Gov. Eric Holcomb, and other state education leaders have called for raising teacher pay, but their plans so far have been vague. An analysis of data from the National Center for Education Statistics and Council of Community and Economic Research ranks Indiana 18th highest in the nation for teacher salaries adjusted for cost of living, leading some to wonder if the state can prevent teachers from moving to other states.

Some Republican lawmakers balked at the critique of the proposal. Rep. Jack Jordan, a Republican from Bremen, said Brown was being "a little dramatic." Rep. Jim Lucas, a Republican from Seymour, said since the state already spends half its budget on K-12 education, districts should be able to find other ways to improve spending.

"If we cannot find money for teachers, shame on us," he said.

But, Democrats and school officials pointed out, money spent outside the classroom, such as on district administrators, transportation, insurance, and utilities, still has an effect on student learning and is not necessarily being used inefficiently. Robert Schultz, chief financial officer for Marion Community Schools, gave the example of athletic coach salaries, which are considered under the state's new school budgeting system to be "instructional."

"Does that make sense to anyone that coaches are more important than superintendents?" Schultz said. "It's not a bunch of administrative costs we've got — it's

Coal cleanup at McAlpine Dam could take weeks

By BROOKE MCAFEE
(Jeffersonville & New Albany) News and Tribune

Army Corp of Engineers officials say it will be weeks before crews complete the recovery of coal and barges that sank when 15 loaded coal barges hit the Clark Memorial Bridge last month.

A tow line pushing 15 loaded coal barges hit the bridge Dec. 25, causing all barges to break free. Six of the freed barges were recovered, but nine remain on the dam, including seven sunken barges. Each barge holds between 1,500 to 1,800 tons of coal.

Crews began loading piles of coal left on the stranded barges onto other empty barges Wednesday morning. After the coal is transferred, the two barges still afloat will be removed and the seven sunken barges will be lifted, according to Shawn Kenney, assistant operations manager for the locks and dams in the Louisville district with the Army Corps of Engineers.

The U.S. Coast Guard and Army Corps of Engineers approved a finalized salvage operation plan Tuesday. Lt. Cmdr. Michael Metz of the U.S. Coast Guard Sector Ohio Valley said the operation was delayed because it took a while to both transport and safely stage the heavy equipment required for the salvage effort. “This is going to be a day-by-day basis of looking at the river conditions,” he said. “It’s something where we have a good idea a few days in advance of what the river conditions are going to be, but every morning we’re going to look at it and make a decision about how to proceed on that day.”

Crews are recovering as much coal as they can, according to Kenney. He does not know how much coal sank to the bottom of the river, and he said there are no plans now to recover any from the river bottom.

One barge is lodged under a gate at the dam. Kenney said he does not anticipate it being an issue, but if the river level drops to where the gate must be closed, it could prevent transit of vessels in the area.

Metz said the Army Corps of Engineers, Coast Guard and Tennessee Valley Towing, the company involved in the crash, have been working together since the incident occurred.

Tennessee Valley Towing is responsible for the whole cost of the operation, Kenney said.

Metz said 15 barges is a normal amount to be transported by towing vessels on the river. The investigation into the cause of the Dec. 25 crash is still ongoing.

He said the Coast Guard’s response to the situation is not affected by the government shutdown because the salvage operation is considered an essential operation.

57 pigeons found in dumpster at rest stop off I-65

By JILLIAN ELLISON
(Lafayette) Journal and Courier

WEST LAFAYETTE— Fifty-seven pigeons were found early Thursday morning in a dumpster at a White County rest stop off I-65, according to an Indiana State Police news release.

At about 1:30 a.m., state trooper David Vido responded to a call of birds in a dumpster and found several boxes of live pigeons, the release said. The pigeons were packed in cardboard produce boxes.

With the assistance of wildlife rehabilitators Kim Hoover of Pulaski County and Kelly Thomas of “A Critters Chance,” most of the pigeons were rescued.

Hoover said the pigeons most likely came from a homing pigeon race, where the birds are taken to a designated location and fly back to their roost.

Hoover said it is rumored to have large sums of money tied to betting on when and if the pigeons will return.

“In my 40 years of being a certified wildlife rehabilitator, this has been a first,” Hoover said in regards to the number of pigeons recovered in one instance.

While pigeon racing is not illegal in Indiana, it is illegal to trap, detain, injure or kill a pigeon, knowing that the pigeon is a racing pigeon, homer, racing homer, or hom-ing pigeon, according to the Indiana State Board of Animal Health.

Because of the poor condition of the pigeons, they were unable to fly when they were recovered, according to the police news release.

As a result of injuries and malnutrition, five of the pigeons found were dead at the scene and two died after being recovered, the release said.

The remaining 50 pigeons are recovering and will be available for adoption in the coming weeks.

For adoption inquiries or more information, contact A Critters Chance in Indianapolis at 765-430-5610.

Longtime GOP state senator enters Indianapolis mayor’s race

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — A longtime Republican state senator is entering the race to challenge Democratic Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett. Sen. Jim Merritt announced his campaign Thursday, saying the city needs to more aggressively attack problems with crime, low morale among police officers and homelessness. Merritt was first elected in 1990 to the state Senate, where he is the utilities committee chairman. He has sponsored expanding Indiana’s needle-exchange programs for intravenous drug users and the state lifeline law, which encourages underage drinkers to seek medical help for others who are dangerously intoxicated. He narrowly won Senate re-election in November, losing the portions of his district that are in Indianapolis, while winning in suburban Fishers. Hogsett was elected mayor in 2015 and formally launched his re-election campaign last month.

divorced mother of two daughters died from stab wounds and the death was ruled a homicide. WRTV-TV reported that state police are asking anyone who may have information about her death to contact them, no matter how insignificant that information might seem. Police say those tips could help them bring closure to Gahimer’s family, including her grandchildren.

Suspected shoplifter in 100-mph chase

PORTAGE — Panties, bras and other shoplifted items were tossed from a car being chased Wednesday by police at speeds nearly reaching 100 mph. The (Northwest Indiana) Times reported the driver almost struck other vehicles before her car tires were shredded by spikes laid across a roadway by police. Four bras, 14 pairs of panties, two candles and some air freshener refills — all valued at about $445 — are believed to have been stolen from a retail store in Portage, east of Gary. The chase started when officers investigating the shoplifting approached the woman about 6:30 p.m. She was arrested when her car was stopped in Chesterton.

The Digital Crossroads Lake Michigan data center is under construction at a former coal-fired power plant site along Lake Michigan that had long been one of the Chicago area’s worst polluters and was shuttered in 2012. The (Northwest Indiana) Times reports that Hammond’s Digital Crossroads center will join other data centers that have been springing up in Chicago to serve soaring demand for data storage, such as for streaming movie and music services.

3 school employees charged with abuse

STANFORD — Three school employees have been charged with criminal abuse involving a special-needs student. News outlets report the incident occurred Jan. 3 at Lincoln County High School in a special education class. A criminal summons for teacher Rebecca Spurlock said teacher’s aide Janie Hasty punched the student, who is autistic and non-verbal. Officials say Hasty and another aide, Teresa Sparkman, then twisted the student’s arm, pulled him off the floor and shoved him. The documents say Spurlock did nothing to intervene. A statement from Lincoln County Superintendent Michael Rowe says an investigation is ongoing. He says the district won’t tolerate inappropriate contact between adults and students.

Sundance adds documentary about Michael Jackson accusers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sundance said Wednesday that a documentary about two boys who accused Michael Jackson of sexual abuse will premiere at its film festival later this month, while the Jackson estate called the film "just another rehash of dated and discredited allegations."

The Sundance Institute announced the addition of "Leaving Neverland" to its festival lineup along with "The Brink," a documentary about former Donald Trump adviser Steve Bannon.

The Jackson estate promptly denounced the "Leaving Neverland."

"This is yet another lurid production in an outrageous and pathetic attempt to exploit and cash in on Michael Jackson," an estate statement said.

A description of "Leaving Neverland" says it will tell the story of two men who are now in their 30s and began long-running relationships with Jackson at ages 7 and 10 when Jackson was at the height of his fame.

The names of the accusers in the documentary were not released. Jackson was acquitted of molestation charges in 2005.

The film is produced and directed by BAFTA-winning director Dan Reed. A representative for Reed did not immediately reply to an after-hours email seeking comment. The Sundance Film Festival kicks off on Jan 24 and runs through Feb. 4.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Take time to reassess the way you look, feel and live. With a little effort, you can bring about changes that will update your life to suit your needs and help accomplish your goals.

Family member makes it all about him

Dear Annie: At the family gatherings on my spouse's side, my brother-in-law "Albert" wants to loudly dominate any conversation by either talking about his life or showing his "great" knowledge and opinions on other subjects. He rarely inquires about how anyone else is or shows much interest in listening to us. He can be totally oblivious to what is happening with others.

A good example happened about a year ago. Four of us met at a restaurant to celebrate a birthday. A few weeks prior, my spouse had missed Albert's birthday lunch because my spouse was hospitalized for some worrisome medical problems. Albert sat down at the table with the three of us, didn't say "happy birthday" to the birthday person, didn't ask how my spouse was doing and didn't inquire about why I was on crutches. We spent most of the evening listening to him feel sorry for himself because only one person had been to his birthday lunch.

He has been very gradually getting worse over the years. I know he is lonely and wants to connect, but our listening to him just seems to encourage more of his annoying, one-sided behavior. Plus, no one in the gathering wants to get cornered by him and have to listen to him going on and on about the little details of his life. I have suggested counseling or finding a close friend when he's been going through one of his rough patches, but he's had excuses. My spouse and Albert's other siblings do not want to talk to him about this because he gets angry and defensive when they try to bring these sorts of things to light. It's as if his life details get pent up and he has to unleash it all at family gatherings. None of the family spends time with him except for holidays because a relationship with him is so one-sided and draining.

I keep trying to tell myself he is just a very lonely man who needs love and compassion. And at times, I can even feel a little of that. But when the family gathers, all that goes out the window, and I'm back to feeling annoyed.

If you could come up with a good solution on how I could change my attitude, I would appreciate it. If not, I have a small hope that he would read your column and see himself. — Annoyed by Brother-in-Law

Dear Annoyed by Brother-in-Law: I admire your empathy, and I commend you for focusing on the one thing you truly have control over: your attitude. Try to show yourself some compassion, and don't feel so guilty when your brother-in-law's behavior annoys you. Irritation is a natural response when someone is behaving narcissistically. Yes, he might act this way because he's lonely, but that doesn't give him carte blanche to act like a bully without consequence. You and the rest of the family shouldn't hesitate to put him in check. If he's dominating the conversation, redirect it by asking another family member at the table about something going on in his or her life. If he interrupts someone, politely but firmly stop him and say, "I don't think (insert name here) was done talking." If he corners you and monopolizes your time, excuse yourself after a few minutes to mingle with the rest of the guests. And do encourage your spouse to (again) let Albert know how his behavior is impacting the rest of the family. Maybe it would spur him to get help.

E. COLI OUTBREAKS CAN BE CAUSED BY CONTAMINATED IRRIGATION WATER

Dear Doctor: It seems like every time we turn on the TV there's another recall of romaine lettuce because of another outbreak of E. coli. What's the deal? How dangerous is it if I get infected?

Dear Reader: You're right -- there seems to be no end in sight to the safety issues having to do with romaine lettuce and E. coli bacteria. It's understandable that there would be occasional safety issues in a food supply chain as vast and complex as the one that serves the United States. When it comes to romaine lettuce, though, the ongoing issues seem to be in a category all their own.

Let's start with E. coli, the bacteria that's causing salad lovers so much trouble. The full name is Escherichia coli, and it comes in many different strains, which live in the intestines of humans and animals. Most strains are harmless and co-exist peacefully with their hosts. However, some strains produce something known as Shiga toxin, a particularly nasty pathogen. Once the "bad" E. coli strains are ingested and reach the large intestine, they multiply rapidly. They then bind to the intestinal lining, which is rich in tiny capillaries. That gives the Shiga toxin a pathway to the kidneys.

The inflammation resulting from the presence of Shiga toxin is believed to cause the initial symptoms, which begin with abdominal cramping that can become quite severe. The diarrhea that follows often becomes visibly bloody. Sometimes this is accompanied by vomiting or, less commonly, fever. The incubation period is anywhere from one to 10 days, but most people become ill within three to four days of infection. This occurs when someone ingests contaminated food or drink, and through the oral-fecal route. The illness lasts anywhere from a few days to close to two weeks. For most, E. coli infection is extremely unpleasant but not life-threatening. But for young children and the elderly, such an infection can be fatal. That's because they are at increased risk of developing hemolytic uremic syndrome, a form of kidney failure.

As for why romaine lettuce appears to be susceptible to infection with E. coli, the reasons aren't completely clear. One outbreak was thought to be caused by water that flowed through an irrigation canal believed to be contaminated by the bacterium. In some cases, infections have been traced back to livestock operations that border fields of romaine. Other points of potential infection are processing facilities, where romaine is washed and bagged. The lettuce industry has pledged mitigations to address each of these issues, particularly those having to do with contaminated irrigation water.

In the meantime, it's vital to abide by the Food and Drug Administration's directives to steer clear of romaine. It may be tempting to keep whatever you have in your fridge and simply wash it thoroughly. Unfortunately, that won't work. E. coli can hide in microscopic crevices, and it's impossible to get rid of it all. In fact, the CDC recommends that consumers thoroughly clean the place in the refrigerator where the contaminated food was stored.

For the latest updates regarding food-borne illnesses and contaminants, including the romaine recalls, visit www.fda.gov/Food.

The second half of the deal's story

By Phillip Alder

Yesterday, we looked at how Arturo Franco from Italy made five clubs on this deal, Board 66 of 176 in the final of the 1983 Bermuda Bowl world team championship in Stockholm. (Franco was a great player who gave up world championships soon after this because he refused to fly anywhere.)

In the given auction, Bob Hamman reached a tenuous four-heart contract on a 4-3 fit. But if you ever want someone to declare in a tricky contract like this, Hamman is an excellent choice.

Hamman won the first trick with his spade king and played a heart to the nine. Giorgio Belladonna (East) falsecarded with the queen, then returned a spade to dummy's ace. Declarer cashed the heart ace and played a heart to his king, hoping for a 3-3 split. Then, he would have given up a club and made his contract. But when Benito Garozzo (West) showed out, Hamman was in big trouble. If he had run the club 10 to East's king, Belladonna would have drawn Hamman's last trump, and the defenders could have taken a lot of tricks in spades and diamonds for down five or six!

However, what else could Hamman do? He led the club 10, and Garozzo covered with the queen! Dummy's ace also collected the king, and suddenly there was a light at the end of the tunnel. Hamman led out the clubs and lost only two hearts and one diamond.

Plus 620 gave the United States 1 international match point when it looked like 15imps to Italy.

Tomorrow: the last deal of the match.

New court aims to ‘break the cycle’ of incarceration

By APRILE RICKERT
(Jeffersonville & New Albany) News and Tribune

CLARK COUNTY — Those in charge of a new specialized court in Clark County say the program could break the cycle of abuse with certain repeat offenders and set them on the path to healthier and more productive lives.

The Clark County Addiction Treatment and Support Program opened its doors in mid-December with preliminary certification under the leadership of Clark County Circuit Court No. 1 Judge Andrew Adams.

While Clark County already has two other specialty courts — one for veterans with addiction issues and one for families dealing with substance abuse — this would be the first to address those who have been slipping through the cracks. Adams hopes this court can help those in active addiction or with mental health issues who are on probation to keep from returning.

“I think we recognize the problem and we do a lot to implement things,” he said, adding that such a program can’t work unless “you get them on treatment as well as support after the fact. A lot of times if we release them on probation, they go right back to the same environment they were in.”

He said prosecutors and police often say they see the same people reoffending, “but on the same note, if we don’t change how we’re treating them or how we’re handling the cases, they’re not going to change,” he said.

The program is designed to help men and women who find themselves in a revolving door of incarceration or arrests get the support and tools to break out of it.

Among the assistance available are tools for sober living, finding jobs and housing, getting help with anger management or addiction and other types of counseling.

Potential candidates for the CCATS program could be contacted by the court — if a person has a charge that could be helped by the program, they’re contacted as soon as possible to determine if they are interested and a good fit. They also may be referred by friends, family or other treatment venues, or apply on their own initiative.

After the initial contact, program coordinator Josh Seybold talks with the individual, with providers and others involved to see if the program could benefit them.

“What’s so crucial to this model is looking for those treatment providers and specialists to help guide the criminal justice system in making appropriate calls when an individual is ready [and] needing these types of services,” Seybold said.

Participation in the new court requires that the person go through an initial long-term inpatient treatment program, which is followed by regular support through the CCATS program to continue their recovery.

The CCATS program does not fund any initial treatments, which may vary. Candidates may receive treatment through a community organization such as LifeSpring or the Healing Place. Candidates also may use Medicare or private insurance to pay for initial treatment.

Male candidates may have the option to go through the Mental Health Addiction Supervision and Treatment Program (MAST), formerly known as the forensic diversion program at the Clark County jail, for the initial treatment before continuing with supervision in the CCATS program.

While MAST, which is funded by the Department of Correction, is not available for women in Clark County, funding and space options are being sought for a similar program.

After this initial phase, participants are then supported as they continue recovery by having regular visits with a case manager, drug and alcohol screens multiple times a week and twice-monthly court sessions lasting from 30 minutes to two hours, depending on the needs of the participant.

The cost to the participant in CCATS is $20 per month.

The program can serve 25 participants and may be able to serve more after certification is complete. The Indiana Office of Court Services is expected to revisit the new court in six months to ensure that it has maintained its original goals and plans. Adams said additional funding could be sought to grow the court, including federal dollars.

“Any time we can give an opportunity for an inmate or someone that’s been arrested to go through a program, the hope is that they get the help they need to not reoffend,” said Clark County Sheriff Jamey Noel. “And be useful and productive, not just for themselves but for society.”

Often, the new charges that can add up come from probation violations — failing a drug screen or committing other crimes to help feed an addiction, Adams said.

“If you don’t receive treatment, about 85 percent of people reoffend,” he said.

Similarly, law enforcement officials in Southern Indiana have pointed to numbers at 80 percent or higher of all crimes having addiction as the root.

“We see a drug addict, they’re utilizing all their resources upfront,” Adams said. “When they run through those, they start borrowing from family, friends ... when the family cuts them off, they start to steal.”

He said that could start small, like taking money from people they know, accelerating to shoplifting or burglary.

“Very rarely do we see somebody come across here with a burglary who doesn’t have an underlying charge in another court,” he said.

But that’s exactly what he and others are trying to halt with the new court.

“The key, I think, to treatment and long-term recovery is ... support to find jobs, housing, sober living,” Adams said. “And the things they learned in treatment to help them with the daily issues that led them down that path in the first place.”

Legal battle over courthouse-based Nativity scene begins

By JORDAN RICHART
(Seymour) Tribune

The debate over whether the county can erect a Nativity scene on the courthouse lawn during the holidays has made its way to the legal system.

Rebecca Woodring is named as the plaintiff in a federal lawsuit filed Dec. 28, 2019 in the New Albany division of the Southern District of Indiana, U.S. District Court. That lawsuit requests that the county cease using the Nativity scene.

Indianapolis attorney Kenneth J. Falk of the American Civil Liberties Union of Indiana filed a complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief on behalf of Woodring.

The lawsuit lays out Woodring’s contentions the Nativity scene violates the establishment clause of the First Amendment to the Constitution.

The Nativity scene includes a lighted Mary, Joseph, a manger, wise men, animals and angels. Falk wrote that the display lacks a secular purpose and endorses the Christian faith.

Woodring believes the government should not endorse a religion, according to the lawsuit.

In the complaint, Woodring said she is a resident of Jackson County and travels to Brownstown multiple times a week and is “forced to come into direct and unwelcome contact with the Nativity scene there” when it is displayed, which has caused her “irreparable harm.”

Woodring’s address is not listed in the court documents, and efforts to contact her were unsuccessful. Falk also declined to discuss details about Woodring, including where she lives in the county and how long she has lived here.

The lawsuit requests the court prohibit the display from being put on the courthouse lawn and to declare Jackson County has violated Woodring’s rights and pay her costs and attorney fees.

Commissioner Matt Reedy on Wednesday declined to comment on the filing, citing pending litigation.

The lawsuit comes after a Dec. 13 letter sent to the county by Madison, Wisconsin-based Freedom From Religion Foundation to request the county immediately remove the Nativity scene after a local resident complained. It is unclear whether Woodring is the person who contacted the organization.

Hundreds of local residents rallied Dec. 22 on the courthouse lawn in support of the Nativity scene. Reedy and fellow Commissioner Bob Gil-laspy attended the rally, which featured speakers, prayers, music and support. No counterprotesters attended the event.

County officials at the time said there were no plans to remove it ahead of Christmas and did not say whether it would be used again. Commissioners are expected to discuss hiring legal counsel during its regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday.

Reedy said at the Dec. 22 rally that the county was in discussions with Liberty Counsel of Orlando, Florida, and that the firm offered to defend the case for free.

The ACLU of Indiana, which is part of a national organization that regularly sues governments in civil liberty cases, has a similar case pending in Fulton County.

A hearing on the case has not been scheduled.

things we need to operate our buildings at the daily level.”

Schultz said his district has already had to make cuts to deal with losses in revenue, such as those incurred from limits on how much property taxes schools can collect, which lawmakers passed nearly a decade ago. The district is about as lean as it can be, Schultz said.

Nearly every group that addressed lawmakers to testify on the bill either criticized the bill or offered cautious support. Several, including Stand for Children Indiana, said the bill should be coupled with actual salary raises, too. J.T. Coopman, executive director of the Indiana Association of Public School Superintendents, asked lawmakers to give districts a chance to adjust to a new budget system before adding to the load by setting new goals around spending.

It was noteworthy that criticism even came from members of the Indiana Department of Education, which under State Superintendent Jennifer McCormick has been fairly hands-off when it comes to lobbying, at least in public testimony. This past fall, McCormick announced that clashes with lawmakers and state political leaders have led her to reject seeking a second term as schools chief.

If districts don’t comply with the spending goals, they would be put on a list and required to communicate to their board and the public that they transferred more than 15 percent of their state dollars away from classroom expenses. They could also be called to justify their spending to the State Board of Education.

According to a survey of most of the state’s school districts, said Denny Costerison, executive director of the Indiana Association of School Business Officials, about 60 percent of responding districts spend more than 15 percent on operations.

House Republicans denied the bill punished schools.

“This bill will not penalize schools in any way,” said Rep. Dale DeVon, the bill’s author and a Republican from Granger. “It’s just more looking at ways that we can help out those funds and maintain a kind of central mindset for the whole state.”

Rep. Todd Huston, co-chairman of the budget-writing

House Ways & Means Committee, said districts shouldn’t see this proposal as something akin to state takeover.

Civics test to graduate introduced in lege session

By SCOTT L. MILEY
CNHI Statehouse Bureau

INDIANAPOLIS — Hoosier students would need to pass a test required of those seeking U.S. citizenship before graduating from high school under a bill authored by three legislators.

Schools would be required to allocate their own resources to administer the 100-question test, although it could be taken online at a student’s home. About 430,000 students in grades 8 through 12 would be eligible for the test in the 2020-21 school year.

The pass rate on taking the test for the first time for those seeking citizenship is 91 percent, according to the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services. Indiana students would be given three attempts to pass the test.

“I think we have a deficiency in government and civics knowledge in America today and I think it’s getting worse,” said Sen. Dennis Kruse, R-Auburn, one of the authors of Senate Bill 132.

During a committee hearing Wednesday, support for the bill came from the American Legion and AMVETS.

The Indiana Department of Education does not support the bill because it adds more testing at a time when the Legislature has asked the department to reduce testing and increase teaching time, said Kenneth Folks, chief of government affairs for DOE.

Administering the test could conflict with the state’s plans to implement Graduation Pathways by 2023, according to Tim McRoberts, associate executive director of the Indiana Association of School Principals. Graduation Pathways is an effort to individualize graduation requirements.

Opponents also said there would be limited time for teachers to prepare and administer the civics test. The bill has been introduced in previous legislative sessions.

High school students are required to earn credits in U.S. history and U.S. government for graduation. The state does not require that civics be taught specifically as a course, but elements of civics are taught beginning in elementary school, officials said.

An optional state test for U.S. government is also being prepared for use by spring.

Ex-Card LB enrolls at Florida

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Former Louisville linebacker Jonathan Greenard has enrolled at Florida as a graduate transfer and will be eligible to play in 2019.

The 6-foot-4, 263-pounder from Hiram, Georgia, missed most of last season because of a wrist injury sustained in the opener. He led the Cardinals with 15 1/2 tackles for loss in 2017, including a team-high seven sacks, and was named a team captain last year.

Greenard played for current Florida defensive coordinator Todd Grantham as a redshirt freshman in 2016.

Greenard could help the Gators offset the loss of linebacker Vosean Joseph and maybe pass-rushers Jachai Polite and CeCe Jefferson. Joseph and Polite left school early to enter the NFL draft. Jefferson was a senior.

Joseph led Florida with 93 tackles, including four sacks, in 2018. Polite tied a school record with six forced fumbles and finished with 11 sacks, two shy of Alex Brown's school record set in 1999.

Indy Eleven plan new facility

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A soccer team in Indianapolis is proposing a $550 million development project that would include a 20,000-seat outdoor soccer stadium.

The Indianapolis Business Journal reports the project proposed by Indy Eleven comes as the team seeks to join Major League Soccer. The project includes a financing plan that would require action from the City-County Council and the Legislature.

Team owner Ersal Ozdemir says he envisions the development, called Eleven Park, as a “transformational urban project.” Plans include lodging, offices and retail space, public spaces and an underground parking structure. He says they want “to make a major impact, not just a stadium.”

Plans call for the stadium to be ready for the 2022 season opener. It would be surrounded by apartments and office buildings that offer views of the field.

Ky. Derby purse upped to $3M

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky Derby's purse will be raised to $3 million this May, an increase of $1 million and the first boost in 14 years.

Churchill Downs said Thursday the winner of the 145th running will receive $1.86 million. The runner-up will earn $600,000, with third place worth $300,000, fourth place $150,000 and fifth place $90,000.

The Derby purse had been $2 million since 2005 and $1 million from 1996-2004.

Track President Kevin Flanery attributes the increase to more bettors using historical racing machines — the electronic form of parimutuel betting — at a recently opened facility near the track.

The second and third legs of the Triple Crown offer total purses of $1.5 million in the Preakness and Belmont stakes.

The purse for the Kentucky Oaks for 3-year-old fillies on May 3 was raised by $250,000 to $1.25 million. It had been worth $1 million since 2011 and was worth $500,000 from 1996-2010.

Churchill Downs also increased purses for some races on the Derby Day undercard on May 4.

Truck champ replaces Sauter

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — NASCAR Truck Series champion Brett Moffitt joined GMS Racing on Thursday in a move that cost another star driver his ride.

The driver carousel began spinning right after Moffitt won the 2018 title in November with Hattori Racing Enterprises. That team had sponsorship struggles all last season and was in danger at times of not making it to the track. Even after winning the title, the team still needed a driver that brought financial backing so Moffitt was let go and replaced by Austin Hill.

With Moffitt available, GMS Racing made the surprise decision to release Johnny Sauter just one month before NASCAR reports to Daytona International Speedway to open the season. The abrupt release came one day before Moffitt was hired.

Moffitt, who is 26, won six races last year in his underdog run to the title. Sauter, 40, also won six races but finished fourth in the series.

Strong start not enough for Panthers

Carroll County got off to a blazing start but Gallatin County cooled the Panthers down the rest of the way and came away with a 68-59 win in the semifinals of the All “A” Classic Eighth Region Tournament at Trimble County on Thursday night.

The Panthers were red hot out of the gate. Keishaun Mumphy opened with four of the team's first six points as Carroll started the game on a 10-0 run and led 14-5 with 3:31 remaining in the period but that's when Gallatin called a timeout and regrouped from there. The Wildcats ended the quarter on a 9-0 run that tied the game, using two free throws by Jarin Rassman, a 3-pointer from Troy Coomer and four points by Lukas McEntire.

“They called a timeout ... it's the same thing that happened to us on Friday night,” Carroll head coach Brian Crank said of a similar situation that was key in the Panthers' 69-68 loss to Gallatin last Friday. “Friday they called a timeout in the fourth quarter and they came out and beat us after it. Their kids calmed down after it tonight and once again it hurt us.”

David Duncan scored three points early in the second quarter and Carroll regained the lead 19-16 but it would prove to be the final time the Panthers SEE: CARROLL

Rebs' pressure keys 48-44 win at Switz. Co.

Southwestern rallies from 10-point deficit to win by four

By DAVID CAMPBELL

Courier Staff Writer

dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Southwestern cranked up its defensive pressure in the second half and turned a 10-point deficit into a 48-44 come-from-behind victory at Switzerland County in girls Ohio River Valley Conference basketball on Thursday.

The Rebels, who shot 51 percent from the game but turned the ball over 22 times, trailed 34-24 with 3:03 left in the third quarter and were still down by seven (42-35) with 3:45 left in the fourth.

But Switzerland County couldn't hold the lead. After turning the ball over just two times in the first half, the Pacers had 15 turnovers in the second and it played right into Southwestern's hands.

Back-to-back steals by the Rebels led to easy buckets by Abby Ralston and Bella Marcum to give Southwestern a 43-42 lead with 2:22 to go. After Aleiah Thomas hit a pair of free throws to give the lead back to Switzerland, Ralston hit two freebies on her end and the Rebels seized the lead for good.

Switzerland didn't score again. Ralston added two more free throws with 31 seconds to play to push the margin to four and Switzerland missed two shots down the stretch allowing the Rebels to escape with the win.

For Southwestern coach Devin Brierly, whose team has lost six out of its last seven games, the win couldn't have come at a better time.

“It feels really good to get a win,” Brierly said. “I think in the second half we looked a lot more in control which is what I wanted to see. In the first half I feel like we got rattled which caused us to get down so much. But in the second half we got settled down into more of what we wanted to do and I thought our defensive pressure really got us going.”

Southwestern's defense proved to be the difference in the game. While several of Switzerland's turnovers in the second half came on bad passes, the Pacers were also a victim of 15 Rebel steals, including five each by Ralston and Marcum.

Switzerland also didn't shoot the ball well. While the Pacers hit seven 3-pointers in the game, they only connected on 36 percent (16-of-44) of their attempts overall while going to the free-throw line just seven times.

“It came down to execution and turning the ball over,” Switzerland coach Mark Boggs said. “I just thought we got a little complacent. (Southwestern) got into their pressure and they made us pay for it. We just made bad plays.”

After struggling with just two points in the first half, Ralston came alive in the second half and scored 14 points on just 4-of-6 shooting while going 5-of-6 from the foul line. Marcum carried the Rebels in the first half with 11 points and her 18 points and eight rebounds both were game-highs.

“I told Abby after the game that I thought she was non-existent in the first half but she did some really good things for us in the second half and stepped up and hit some really crucial free throws. That's what you expect a senior to do,” Brierly said. “Bella has been playing well all year and for her to carry us in that first half was huge. Without her, we're not in the ballgame. I'm really proud of those two and I expect that out of them every night.”

Raiders give 12-2 Walton tighter game

By ROB LAFARY

Courier Staff Report

sports@madisoncourier.com

Walton-Verona dominated Trimble County 81-40 in a regular season matchup played on Dec. 5 but the rematch on Thursday night was more of an accurate account of the caliber team Trimble can be, even if the outcome was a second loss to the Bearcats this year.

Walton (12-2) finally pulled away in the second half to the tune of a 69-54 win in the second semifinal of the

All “A” Eighth Region Tournament, but Trimble never backed down from the bigger opponent. The Raiders battled the entire way and made one of Kentucky's top 2A programs earn the victory in every area of the game.

“We went from losing by 41 points to losing by 15 points,” Trimble head coach Ron Couch said. “We know now what it takes to play with a team like Walton. We are still getting to where we need to be in terms of putting a whole game together. But we are starting to fight and we are heading in the right direction. We're not backing down and we are realizing that we are a good team and that we can play with some teams. We just keep going and keep working hard.”

Walton's 6-foot-10 Xavier commit Dieonte Miles was a handful for Trimble's defense the entire night but SEE: TRIMBLE

Ogunbowale leads No. 1 Irish over No. 2 Louisville

By JOHN FINERAN

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND — As far as Arike Ogunbowale and coach Muffet McGraw were concerned, No. 1 Notre Dame's 82-68 victory over No. 2 Louisville on Thursday night was just another Atlantic Coast Conference game in January.

“Any game in the ACC is a big win; there's a lot of great teams and a lot of upsets going on,” Ogunbowale said after scoring 26 of her game-high 30 points in the second half to help the Fighting Irish overcome 18 turnovers to beat the Cardinals in the 59th No. 1 vs. No. 2 showdown in women's college basketball history and the second involving Notre Dame this season.

“That was just a great basketball game,” McGraw said after her Fighting Irish (15-1, 3-0) won their eighth straight and first game since regaining the top spot from Connecticut, which beat then-No. 1 Notre Dame 89-71 on Dec. 2 in the last meeting of the top two teams. “For 1 vs. 2, it was everything you wanted to see. It was a great win in terms of the conference, but it's still early and we've got a lot of games to play.”

It was Ogunbowale's 37th straight double-digit scoring game — she had just five points in Notre Dame's 100-67 loss at Louisville on Jan. 11, 2018.

Brianna Turner, who missed Notre Dame's two losses last season to Louisville while recovering from ACL surgery, added 16 points on 7-of-11 shooting, six rebounds and three blocked shots. Jackie Young had 14 points and five assists for the Irish, who got 15 rebounds from Jessica Shepard to win the battle of the boards, 48-32.

“We were trying to get the ball to Bri a lot and with good reason,” McGraw said of the height advantage the 6-foot-3 and 6-foot-4 Shepard gave Notre Dame over Louisville.

Asia Durr scored 29 points and Bioncia Dunham had 10 for the Cardinals. SEE: NO. 1 VS NO. 2

Toppers no match for Milan with top scorer Grote out

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

A wounded Shawe squad was no match for Milan as the Hilltoppers lost 50-10 in girls Ohio River Valley Conference basketball Thursday on the road.

The Hilltoppers lost senior Kate Grote to a potential season-ending knee injury in Tuesday's loss to Henryville. Grote is supposed to be evaluated today and will know more about the extent of her injury.

"She is injured but we will not know the details until tomorrow sometime," Shawe coach Terry King said. "We just have to hope for the best. We mostly feel bad for her. We're all pretty upset. It's a massive loss for sure."

Without Grote, who is averaging just under 22 points per game and is just 60 points shy of the school's career scoring record, the Hilltoppers simply didn't have enough firepower to keep up with a much taller and deeper Indians squad.

Milan jumped out to a 22-0 lead after the first quarter and although the Indians cooled Shawe senior guard Kate Grote missed Thursday's game after injuring a knee Tuesday at Henryville. She is averaging 22 points per game and stands just 60 points short of the Lady Hilltoppers' career scoring record.

considerably in the second, they still led 25-5 at halftime. Another big quarter by Milan in the third — this one 18-2 — turned the game into a rout. Abigail Hill and Phoebe Grote scored three points each to lead Shawe while Grace McAllister and Lina Leatherman had two points each. The 10 points was the fewest Shawe has scored in a game since a 42-10 loss to Christian Academy in the 2011-12 season.

Cionna Bailey scored 16 points, Courtney Bruns had 14 and Lauren Roell had 11 to lead Milan.

Shawe falls to 4-16 overall and 0-5 ORVC. The Hilltoppers' next scheduled game, at South Central on Saturday, has been canceled due to the team not having enough players. Shawe dressed just six players for Thursday's game.

Shawe will next see action on Jan. 22 when the Hilltop-

held an advantage and Gallatin struck again. Devin McAllister drilled a three that sparked an 11-2 run and Coomer again aided, scoring eight points that allowed the Wildcats a 30-21 cushion and eventually a 34-27 margin at halftime.

The Panthers were not only suffering from some inconsistency in the second quarter, but were also forced to play without forward Trevor Sandusky for the final 6:56 of the first half after he was sent to the bench with his third foul. His absence allowed Gallatin much more room to work with on the inside and the result was either easy baskets or numerous trips to the free throw line.

"We got in a funk where we just quit taking care of the ball and when we did we didn't take our shots," Crank said. "Can't argue with our effort because we had some guys come in that are inexperienced but gave us good minutes but we've got to play our game. Trevor (Sandusky) does something nobody else on our team can do and that's clog up the middle. When we lost that, we just weren't as intimidating on the inside as we needed to be. We definitely missed that in the second quarter."

Gallatin (12-4) spent the third quarter and early portion of the fourth opening the game up as the lead blossomed.

Rassman scored six points and a 10-0 run allowed for a 47-31 advantage early in the third which was the largest lead of the night. The double-digit stranglehold continued into the fourth period and the Wildcats led by 12 points with 2:25 remaining.

But the effort Crank spoke of allowed for the Panthers to remain a threat and the deficit dwindled quickly. Trailing by the 12-point margin again with only 1:46 left, Mumphrey's basket was followed by Justin Williams' bucket underneath. A steal on the inbounds pass freed up Duncan for a wide-open three that he buried and suddenly the game stood at 64-59 with 40 seconds to go.

The Wildcats, however, answered as Carroll was forced to foul. Coomer calmly stepped to the line and sank four consecutive free throws to hold the Panthers at-bay and stretching the margin back out to nine points by the end of the game.

"Our guys didn't quit," Crank added. "In years past we may not have been able to put ourselves in that spot late in the fourth quarter. Third year here in the program and our guys know what is expected of them. It's starting to become automatic for our guys. The effort tonight was just tremendous."

Carroll shot 53 percent from the field as Duncan led the way with 18 points on 8-of-16 shooting. Mumphrey, also a 50 percent shooter on the night, recorded a double-double of 17 points and 10 rebounds.

Gallatin shot 46 percent from the field but 10 made 3-pointers was a difference maker, especially during the second and third quarters when the Wildcats gained control of the game.

Coomer led all scorers with 21 points, shooting 5-of-8 from the 3-point line and knocking down five free throws. Rassman and Hayden Dickerson each scored 12 points while Bryant Caldwell added 11 points on 5-of-8 shooting from the field.

Carroll (8-7) hosts Owen County on Monday night. The Panthers, who have lost four of their last five games, defeated Owen 67-55 back on Dec. 6.

early on the rest of Walton's roster struggled from the field and allowed the Raiders a lead in the first quarter.

While Miles opened the game with a dunk and scored six points in the quarter, the rest of the Bearcats scored just five points. Trimble shook off the dunk and took a 4-2 lead on back-to-back baskets by Grant Weaver and Reece Webster. Walton briefly led 6-4 after buckets by Ethan Brook and Tyler Schrader but Trimble finished the quarter on an 11-5 run. Weaver scored his fourth point on a shot followed by a Ben Stevens 3-pointer and two points off the bench by Beau Turner.

"It's just about effort and fight," noted Couch. "I thought we played well towards the end and we had some guys step up. It was a much better effort than when we played that team in December."

Webster led Trimble with 18 points, 14 of those points coming in the second half. Weaver, who was instrumental in the fourth quarter run, scored 8 of his 13 points in the second half.

Miles, who scored six points in the first go-around with Trimble, led all scorers on Thursday with 19 points. Jones scored 13 points in the second half en route to 18 points and

Colts’ defensive turnaround providing playoff spark

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts’ defense was reeling early this season.

After six games, it had allowed an average of 30 points, had given up 37 or more points in three consecutive losses, was languishing near the bottom of the league’s overall rankings and showed no sign of a turnaround.

Today, those performances are almost recognizable. Though the names remain essentially unchanged, the Colts overcame that dismal start and have emerged as one of the NFL’s stingiest units and a key cog in Indy’s playoff run.

“We feel good, we’ve been rolling,” rookie linebacker Darius Leonard said. “We just want to keep it going. We want to keep everything rolling.”

Leonard and his teammates face their biggest challenge yet in Saturday’s divisional-round game at Kansas City (TV: Live on NBC at 4:30 p.m.). But the timing couldn’t be better for a young, suddenly sturdy defense that still has plenty to prove.

Over the past six weeks, the Colts have given up 12.0 points per game, posted their first shutout in four years and ascended to No. 11 in the rankings. But many wonder whether the defense can hold up against the league’s highest-scoring team.

So far, Indy (11-6) has passed every test. The defense has played a vital role in two five-game winning streaks. Indy is one of two teams that have not allowed a 100-yard rusher this season and have had at least one turnover in 16 of 17 games.

Outsiders have noticed the turnaround by a unit once regarded as a weak link.

“I think the players have bought in and they play hard,” Chiefs coach Andy Reid said. “They’re accurate with their assignments.”

Reid isn’t alone.

Leonard, the league’s leading tackler, was named first-team All-Pro last week, and first-year defensive coordinator Matt Eberflus interviewed Sunday for the Cleveland Browns’ head coaching job. Though he wasn’t hired, the dramatic ascension could help Eberflus stay on the coaching radar.

What’s changed? Not much personnel-wise from opening day.

Defensive tackle Al Woods and linebacker Skai Moore both wound up on injured reserve. Margus Hunt moved from defensive end to defensive tackle and Pierre Desir claimed one of the starting cornerback spots. Otherwise, the lineup remained as consistent as Eberflus’ message.

“When you keep doing the same things over and over again and you get good at the fundamentals of the game, then you can start adding a little bit to your package because the guys understand the basics,” Eberflus said.

“You can never move on or never forget the basics of what your system is about. That to me is the hustle, the intensity, taking the ball away and being smart players.”

Eberflus, initially hired by Josh McDaniels and retained by Frank Reich after McDaniels backed out of the job, scrapped the 3-4 defensive front from previous coaching staff and installed the Tampa-2 preferred by general manager Chris Ballard.

Reich was on board, too, remembering how the system helped the Colts win a Super Bowl during his first stint with the team.

The scheme relies largely on speed and trust and was a perfect fit for a team trying to rebuild. Only three full-time starters returned in the same spot this season while a fourth, Jabaal Sheard, moved from outside linebacker to defensive end, but the simplicity shortened the learning curve for everyone, including the youngsters.

And after six games, things started to mesh. Leonard became the breakout star, the pass rush became more consistent and the run defense tightened up.

“We go into this game knowing that we can beat the best,” Leonard said. “Once you go in as an underdog, there’s a lot more chips on your shoulder. It makes you want to play harder. It makes you want to win more.”

NOTES: Four-time Pro Bowl receiver T.Y. Hilton (ankle) is one of five players who did not practice Wednesday. The others are defensive tackle Denico Autry (shoulder), receiver Ryan Grant (toe), safety Malik Hooker (hip/foot) and defensive end Tyquan Lewis (knee). Hilton expects to play. ... Tight end Eric Ebron (hip), receiver Dontrelle Inman (shoulder/finger) and Sheard (knee) were limited in practice. SS Eric Berry (heel) did not practice for the second straight day Thursday, and Chiefs coach Andy Reid refused to say whether he would play Saturday. ... WR Sammy Watkins (foot) practiced and appears likely to play. “He’s had a good week,” Reid said. “Looks pretty good.” ... OLB Dorian O’Daniel (calf) did not practice, potentially depriving the Chiefs of a player on four special teams units. “These are day-to-day things,” Reid said.

WOMEN’S REGIONAL COLLEGE ROUNDUP

No. 16 UK beat No. 13 Vols 73-71

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Maci Morris scored 27 points before fouling out as No. 16 Kentucky withstood an injury to Taylor Murray and hung on for a 73-71 victory over No. 13 Tennessee on Thursday night.

The Lady Volunteers (12-3, 1-2 SEC) have lost consecutive home games for the first time since December 1996. Tennessee fell 66-64 to Missouri on Sunday.

Murray was fouled by Tennessee’s Zaay Green under the basket on a fastbreak attempt late in the first half. Murray sat on the bench throughout the second half with an ice pack around her left knee.

“We’re really hopeful that it’s good news,” Kentucky coach Matthew Mitchell said in regard to Murray’s situation after the game. “I’ll put it this way. Sometimes you know (it’s bad news) already, and we don’t know what’s going on. So we’re hopeful about that.”

After trailing by 16 late in the third quarter, Tennessee cut the margin to 66-64 before Kentucky’s Jaida Roper sank a 3-pointer with 55 seconds left to help secure the victory.

Evina Westbrook scored 20, Rennia Davis had 12 and Mimi Collins added 11 for Tennessee. Ogechi Anyagaligbo scored 13 and Roper had 10 for Kentucky (15-2, 2-1).

Kentucky won on a night when Rhyne Howard had just six points and five rebounds in 14 minutes before fouling out. Howard entered the night averaging 17.4 points and 7 rebounds to lead Kentucky in both categories.

Purdue knocks off No. 17 Iowa 62-57

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Karissa McLaughlin and Dominique Oden scored 16 points apiece, Purdue went on a 16-3 run in the fourth quarter and held on to upset No. 17 Iowa 62-57 on Thursday night.

The Boilermakers (12-5, 3-1 Big Ten) were down by eight less than three minutes into the fourth quarter when they went on their run to lead by five with less than two minutes to go. Hannah Stewart’s layup with 36 seconds remaining pulled Iowa (11-4, 2-2) within 58-57.

McLaughlin was fouled with 11 seconds left and made the second of two free throws. On the inbound, Iowa turned the ball over and fouled and McLaughlin made two free throws for a 61-57 lead. After a Hawkeyes miss, Tamara Farquhar finished it off with a late free throw.

Megan Gustafson, the nation’s leading scorer at 26.8, had 19 points and 13 rebounds for her 14th double-double before fouling out with 1:43 to play. Stewart had 17 points.

There were 14 ties and seven lead changes and Iowa’s late lead was the largest of the game.

Buckeyes top No. 25 Indiana 55-50

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Carmen Grande scored 19 points, including four free throws in the last 20 seconds, and Ohio State outscored No. 25 Indiana 25-14 in the fourth quarter to pull off a 55-50 upset on Thursday night.

The Buckeyes (5-8, 1-3 Big Ten) took a 51-45 lead when Janai Crooms completed a 3-point play with 1:26 to play to cap a 7-0 run. The Hoosiers (14-2, 3-1) responded with five straight, closing within 51-50 on Brenna Wise’s 3-point play with 33.5 seconds left.

Grande then hit two free throws at 20.5 remaining and after Indiana missed 3-pointer, Grande rebounded and clinched it with two free throws at 6.4 to go.

Ohio State snapped a five-game losing streak and Indiana’s four-game winning streak with its 13th straight win in the series. The Hoosiers had entered the Top 25 for just the fifth time in school history on Monday.

A 12-0 run in the first period gave Indiana the biggest lead of the game at 14-2. Jensen Caretti scored the final basket of the third quarter to start a 10-0 run that gave Ohio State its first lead of the game, 38-36 less than two minutes into the fourth quarter.

Both teams struggled to find their shot, combining to go 3 of 26 on 3-pointers with 34 turnovers.

Jaelynn Penn led Indiana with 12 points.

nals (14-1, 2-1).

“We just came up a few points short,” Louisville coach Jeff Walz said. “I thought our kids played hard. I thought it was a really good basketball game. If you look at the score, it was a 14-point game. If you were there, it was not. We fought.”

The Cardinals cut a 10-point deficit to two twice in the fourth quarter, the last at 68-66 with 1:48 remaining, but Turner’s basket and Ogunbowale’s 3-pointer with 40 seconds remaining propelled the Irish to a 14-2 finish.

Ogunbowale, who had a team-high six assists, scored seven of her final 12 points from the foul line as Louisville, which was whistled 28 times for personals and lost Dunham, Arica Carter and Dana Evans, saw Notre Dame finish 29 of 39 from the free-throw line.

“I kept challenging our kids that you can’t worry about it — if you foul out you foul out,” Walz said. “If we have to leave at the start of the fourth quarter because there’s no one left, we’ll get home early.”

Durr, who made 9 of 20 shots from the field but was just 1 of 8 from beyond the 3-point line, scored 19 points in the first half, including 12 straight for her team in a 3:47 span between the first and second quarters en route to a 35-33 halftime lead.

Notre Dame’s biggest lead of the half was four points, 15-11, when Turner converted a pass from Ogunbowale at 3:12 of the first quarter. Durr scored Louisville’s next eight points to make it 19-16 before the Irish took a 20-19 lead on two free throws each by Ogunbowale and Young.

An 8-1 run by Louisville to start the second quarter gave the Cardinals a 27-21 lead and forced McGraw to call a timeout. At that point, Louisville had forced eight turnovers while not committing one.

Louisville’s lead reached seven twice in the second quarter, the last time at 35-28 on Dunham’s layup with 2:38 to play. Notre Dame, which hit just two field goals in 14 attempts (14 percent) in the quarter, closed on a 5-0 run, all from the free-throw line as Louisville forced 11 turnovers.

“We just did not take care of the ball and credit their defense,” McGraw said. “We weren’t getting any flow or rhythm to the offense. And defensively, I was disappointed how we defended Durr.”

Ogunbowale nailed a 3-pointer just before the buzzer to give the Irish a 57-47 lead going into the final quarter. Louisville made just 2 of 11 shots in the quarter and had four turnovers to two by Notre Dame.

“I was just trying to be aggressive; they were getting a lot of fouls,” Ogunbowale said.

BIG PICTURE

Louisville: The Cardinals, who entered the game having forced 185 turnovers in their last nine games, forced 11 in the first 20 minutes against the Irish. Louisville converted them into 15 points. Plus Arica Carter and Dana Evans each had three personals at halftime and Durr drew her third at the 6:42 mark of the third quarter.

Notre Dame: The Irish, who came into the game averaging 89.1 points with the help of 53.1 percent shooting in their last six victories, were held to just 33 points in the first half on 8-of-27 shooting (29.6 percent). But the Irish stayed close with a 29-17 effort on the boards and Louisville’s foul trouble.

STATS AND STUFF

Notre Dame finished the game shooting 44.6 percent (25 of 56) but held Louisville to 38.2 percent (26 of 68) including the 2-of-11 (18.2 percent) effort in the third quarter. . Louisville made just 4 of 20 3-pointers, with Carter, who had made 10 of 15 in her first two ACC games coming in, finishing at 1 for 7 in addition to Durr’s 1 of 8. . Louisville outscored the Irish 25-16 in points off turnovers, but the Irish were 36-32 in points in the paint and were 20-5 in second-chance points and 23-6 on the fast break. . No. 1 has now beaten No. 2 37 times in 59 games. . Notre Dame is now 2-6 in 1 vs. 2 games. . Notre Dame has now won 52 straight conference games (ACC and Big East) in the Purcell Pavilion, which was sold out (9,149) for the third time this season (Connecticut and Lehigh, for McGraw’s 900th win as a coach).
